DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because it does not meet the 50-150 word requirement as well as being a brief but concise description of what applicant feels is novel. Specifically, the abstract is too short and fails to discuss the method of making a lumbar/thoracic implant. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 26, 31-36 and 38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lin et al (US Patent Application Publication 2002/0016633).

Lin et al disclose making (Column 2, Paragraph 0032 and 0033) an intervertebral spacer from bone harvested from the calcaneus with various configurations such as square, rectangular, angled, circular, hexagonal, and a trailing end having angled walls (22). Lin et al specifically discuss making horizontal cuts across the metaphysics of a long bone such that anatomical loading for the spacer is the same as the donor location. Therefore, about 98% of each cut would be cancellous bone with a thin layer of cortical bone surrounding the cancellous bone. The bone as long as it is healthy (as it should be, otherwise it would not be selected as donor bone) would be able to support 1000 pounds. Therefore, Lin et al disclose cutting a portion of the calcaneus into two or more subsections (each cross-sectional piece). Each piece having a thin layer of cortical bone formed integral and partially surrounding a core of cancellous bone.

Lin et al fail to disclose how a cut would specifically be made in the calcaneus from a donor and therefore is silent whether the cut is perpendicular to the long axis of the calcaneus. Applicant has not stated any unexpected result or benefit of performing cross-sectional cuts perpendicular to the long axis of the calcaneus and actually states that such is not the only possible direction for cutting. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to consider making cross-sectional cuts either perpendicular to the long axis of the calcaneus or perpendicular to the axial loading axis as a matter of mere preference with no unforeseen benefits or results.

It would have been further been obvious to extract the calcaneal bone from a living donor of similar genetic composition in cases where the subjects own bone would be detrimental (severe arthritis, cancer, osteoporosis, general bone disease) while reducing the likelihood of tissue rejection by the subject's immune system as well as reducing additional trauma to the patient if bone was acquired from a deceased individual.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment of "formed integral" necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL.
